The Association of Recovery in Higher Education (ARHE) is the only association exclusively representing Collegiate Recovery Programs (CRPs) and Communities (CRCs), the faculty and staff who support them, and the students who represent them.

ARHE provides the education, resources, and community connection needed to support the unique educational journeys of recovering students.

We are a membership-based network of professionals, administrators, faculty, staff, students, parents, and policy makers, serving as a national support system for propagating and supporting the vision of Collegiate Recovery Programs.

ARHE offers time-tested, research- and experience-based methods for fostering and supporting students in Recovery and models for developing and integrating CRPs into institutions in ways that best serve recovering students.

Membership with ARHE is an investment in your future within the Collegiate Recovery profession while also supporting the growth of all programs.
